

Planning for innovation.

A business lease for iPad and Mac makes sense.

iPad, iPhone and Mac are transforming the way companies do business. The new technologies and incredible applications that these products deliver—all within their thin and light designs—allow employees to stay productive anywhere.

Deploying the latest technology helps to maintain competitiveness. One way your business can stay current is through leasing. By matching the lease term to a technology life cycle plan, you get the best use of your equipment with a predictable upgrade schedule. Also, costs associated with obsolete technology, such as storage and system updates, are minimized.

Leasing simplifies technology life cycles and helps your business keep the latest equipment in the field. With a lease, businesses typically pay less over the lease term than the original equipment cost. And a lease offers customized payment structures instead of a single cash payment.

No matter how many Mac, iPad, and iPhone devices your business needs, leasing creates a predictable budget and a clear plan for your technology upgrades.
